There is no rule under which they can be asked to supply 4 copies as suggested by the Regr. of Authorised Publications. The proposal involves the maintenance of separate stock account of the books so delivered. Besides the inconveniences now experienced in selling additional copies that might be required are likely to be experienced in making payment of the value of books under the proposed arrangement. It does not also seem proper to ask the publishers to supply books &c. and wait for payment for a length of time.

6/9 Printers now deliver 2 copies & they must keep a spare copy under the Law available for Govt. for one year. It is probable that this requirement is not fully realised by Printers. If considered necessary, a notice inviting attention to this may be published from time to time, or sent to the Press or Sent to the Press, say annually in July

If requisitions are received later than by one year, delay is unavoidable. An amendment of the law is not desirable to provide against such rare instances. An easier alternative is to insist on the Copies of Maps to be made available on such occasions as a local collection is always available after B. P. closes

SIR,

I have the honor to state that according to the existing practice, the printers of books in the State are required to send to the District Magistrate two copies for purposes of registration, one of which will be retained in the District Magistrate's office and the other is transmitted to this office. When the catalogue of publications is forwarded to the India Office Library and the British Museum in London, some of the books are selected by the respective Librarians who send a requisition for a copy each. The time taken between the date of receipt of a book in this office and the date of the receipt of the requisition usually exceeds six months when, this office starts correspondence with the Authors of the books selected asking them to supply the publications. But the experience of this office has invariably been that the authors are not usually found at the address given, that the printers are unable to supply the books wanted as they will have delivered the copies to the authors and that when the authors are found, they usually plead inability to supply the book either because it has been sold out or is not bound or is not available for some reason or other. In many cases no reply is received from the authors for months in response to the requisition from this office. At various times, the clerk in charge in order to save delay and correspondence has been obliged to go round the city, if it is Bangalore, finding out the author to get the book. This has caused endless delay and unnecessary correspondence.

I therefore beg to propose that instructions may be issued to the printers of books to supply in future four copies of the books to the District Magistrate instead of two as at present: one of which will be retained by him and the remaining three being forwarded to this office. Out of these three copies, one copy will be made use of by this office for transmission to the Education Department and the other two retained against the possible contingency of being selected by the London Libraries. Should they be so selected, they will at once be despatched without wasting any time in correspondence with the authors and the cost of the books selected remitted to the address given by the author.

If this course is adopted, it will result in considerable saving of delay, correspondence and and trouble and I beg you will kindly get the sanction of Government for my proposal at a very early date.

I have the honor to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

G. Ramachandra

Order No. G. 7601-9—P. P. 19-19-3, dated 19th September 1919.

Government observe that it is neither desirable nor necessary to increase the number of copies of books to be delivered by the printers under Act XXV of 1867 in order to provide against such remote instances as those represented by the Registrar. They are, however, pleased to direct that the copy which is at present kept by the District Magistrate should also be sent in future to the Registrar of Authorized Publications in Mysore.
